

We love to brag on our cadets and Logan S. has provided us with another wonderful opportunity to brag. On his way home from drill on Mother's Day, his family stopped by a local grocery store. Due to some local flooding in the area, a bridge along their usual route home was flooded out. As they reached the bridge, they saw the water but no road barriers so they thought it was ok to take the road. Once they reached the top of the bridge they noticed that there was too much water on the other side to pass. Logan's mom happened to look to the right just before backing up and she saw a Jeep driving down the railroad tracks under the bridge. They initially thought that it was simply someone attempting to recklessly battle the flood waters on a joy ride. Once Logan's family had completely backed down the bridge back to the main road, they decided to at the sheriff's office to tell them about the joy riders on the tracks but no one was there. They decided to try their luck across the street to the fire station and the man told Logan's family that they couldn't do anything until there was an accident. Logan reminded his mother that there was another road that crossed the tracks and they decided to make sure the drive was safely off the tracks. However, this was not the case. Logan's family saw the car on the tracks down about a mile and a lady walking around it. So Logan took off running to see if they needed help before a train came. Cadet Logan ran the mile and then helped push the Jeep containing the lady and her 3 children to safety. Cadet Logan is a true embodiment of honor, courage and commitment!
